TILES & FLOORING

Decorative wall and floor tiles are a versatile option to incorporate into your kitchen scheme. Materials including stone, ceramic, glass and porcelain are available in a variety of shapes, size and finishes offering a practical option whether you're looking to cover a large surface area or create a feature.

If you're considering your colour options, start by deciding if you want a solid block of colour, tiles that feature colour variations or a flat or risen surface to the tile. A patterned tile can add interest by creating a unique focal point.

Try not to compromise on quality and remember to always purchase an additional 5–10% more tiles than you actually need. This allows you to compensate for cuts and breakages and ensures you have the same batch and shade should you need additional tiles.

If you're looking for an alternative to tiles – especially if you're connecting your kitchen and dining area – choose from a range of wood and luxury vinyl tile flooring in store. Available in a choice of styles, colours and textures, select from a variety of laying patterns for a high performance and low maintenance finish.

SINKS

Your sink will need to co-ordinate with the style and look of your kitchen. From washing up to rinsing vegetables, the sink will be in regular use. So during the planning stages consider the size, shape and material required. If you've incorporated a dishwasher into your scheme you may only need a single bowl, whilst larger households or those who do a lot of food preparation, may find a double bowl more useful. Consider whether your kitchen would benefit from an undermounted or inset sink. Undermount sinks are installed underneath the worksurface offering a streamlined look between worktops and sink, while inset sinks are installed from above into a pre-prepared space in the worktop.

STAINLESS STEEL

A stainless steel sink offers both a practical and stylish option for your kitchen. Hard-wearing, easy to clean and simple to maintain, stainless steel sinks are highly resistant to cracks and chips.

CAST IRON

Featuring a high gloss surface, a cast iron sink is a durable option. Maintaining a rich finish that resists chipping and denting it can also be produced with deeper bowls due to the strength of the material.

COMPOSITE

An increasingly popular choice, a composite sink offers both strength and durability. Composite sinks can be scratch resistant, suitable for curved corners and can withstand high temperature whilst also giving your kitchen a more contemporary feel.

CERAMIC

Traditional in style, ceramic sinks are a hard-wearing choice and offer a smooth, impervious surface. Ideal for a country kitchen, Butler and Belfast models are popular options. Easy to clean, regular care will ensure it remains stain free for many years.

TAPS

Discover an extensive collection of taps to complement your sink and the style of your kitchen. Whether you're looking for a classic or contemporary option, your tap will be frequently used, so function and practicality are important as well as style and finish. If you're looking for innovative features, choose from the latest cutting edge designs. From a third tap lever to produce fresh, filtered water, a pull-out spray nozzle to make washing up easier, or a tap that produces boiling water, we've an option to suit your needs.

LIGHTING

Effective and stylish lighting is an essential part of your new kitchen, helping you to undertake everyday tasks including food preparation and cooking as well as socialising with family and friends. Lighting should be layered, combining task lighting with softer ambient lighting to create the perfect living environment.

ACCENT LIGHTING

Direct your lighting to create a focal point in your kitchen, transforming your space with the flick of a switch from somewhere to prepare your food to an entertainment zone. Plus, if there's a particular feature in your kitchen that you're keen to highlight, accent lighting can be used to focus on a particular area in the room.

TASK LIGHTING

Directing the light where you need it most, task lighting is a functional choice, ideal for spaces in your kitchen where tasks are taking place. Under cabinet lighting will aid in careful food preparation whilst angled spotlights fall where you need them most, such as by the hob or sink area.

AMBIENT LIGHTING

Ambient lighting is the ideal way to combine atmosphere and practicality. Softer lighting solutions can be included above wall units or the underside of the worktop for decorative purposes. Also lighting inside cabinets or drawers is an innovative option and can be sensor operated for ease.
